Elul Leeches

When Rabbi DovBer, the 2nd Chabad Rebbe-to be, was five years old, he studied under Reb Ber the melamed (tutor), in the home of Reb Avraham the doctor. Once he overheard Dr. Avraham bemoaning, "We are already far into Elul, but I haven't yet prepared the leeches!" [Leeches were used for healing purposes and were only out during the warm summer months.]

When young DovBer came home after cheder (elementary school level for boys in the yeshiva system), he used to spend time in the company of the chasidim who were in the room next to the room of his father, Rabbi Schneur Zalman, the 'Alter Rebbe' of Chabad. One day he saw them sitting around and talking, when they suddenly began to laugh. Hearing them, the young boy reprimanded them, "We are deep into Elul, you haven't yet prepared the leeches, yet you sit here laughing?!"

They immediately assumed that this was a vort ('word' of Torah) he had heard from his father, the Rebbe, and began to think deeply into its meaning. They concluded that just as leeches are used to draw out a patient's diseased or overheated blood, during the month of Elul, the final month of the Jewish year, so one should do away with one's negative desires in preparation for Rosh HaShana, the start of the new year.

When word of their discussion reached the Alter Rebbe, he said, "Such is the way of the Baal Shem Tov (founder of the Chasidic movement) - to learn a lesson in avodas HaShem (serving G-d) from every physical thing that one sees or hears. Whoever follows this path and uses all physical things for spiritual improvement, will instill in himself and in his descendants a spark of inspiration in serving G-d."

Successive generations of chasidim recall how on that Rosh HaShana, the floor was wet with tears from the impact of the five-year-old Rebbe-to be's vort; and how on Simchas Torah, the shoes of the chassidim were worn out and torn by the exuberant dancing inspired by the Alter Rebbe's promise.
